Copyrighted works

posting on Blackboard?

Copyrighted?

Assume that a work is copyrighted unless otherwise indicated (e.g., by a CC license).

Other exceptions are laws, decrees, government regulations and works that are no longer copyrighted (expires 70 years after death of author).

More information can be found on the website auteursrechten.nl/en

Creative Commons?

A CC license allows the author of a work to specify the conditions under which his or her work may be distributed.

There are 4 conditions that when combined yield 6 licensing options:

From Attribution-only as a condition to Attribution-Non Commercial-No Derivative Works

More information can be found on the website creativecommons.org

Stichting UvO?

NHL Stenden pays a commutation fee via the UvO Foundation for all short acquisitions (Easy Access agreement).

If you copy a short section (text or image), always mention the source.

More information about the Easy Access scheme for the universities of applied sciences and a FAQ with answers to questions about what is allowed and how, can be found on the website stichting-uvo.nl/en/Hbo.

Author yourself? Student author?

If you yourself are the author of the work, and you created it in the course of performing your job, then the copyright most likely lies with NHL Stenden. See the publication policy for this.

Is the student the author? If so, the student has the copyright, unless agreed otherwise. Therefore, to post a student's work on Blackboard, permission from the student is required.
